An outback experience gives you insight into the significance of the area, with traditional people who know the local history, live and experience it, and are willing to share it with you.

Visit extraordinary landscapes steeped in hues of striking intensity. Soak in the atmosphere of a land of magnificent contrasts

Comments from previous participants

"Seeing the situation first hand in communities has made it all real for me, instead of just media reports or lectures or readings."

"In such a short but intensive space of time, a whole new world in regards to the Aboriginal people of Australia opened up."

"Powerful, enriching and confronting experience for participants."

"This was a very valuable introduction to Aboriginal culture, health services and the physical environment in which the communities live. It was an excellent starting point on which to build."

"I'm able to use what I've learnt to better understand the complex issues affecting the health of Aboriginal Communities."

In 2009 be a part of a unique, interactive learning experience.

The Spencer Gulf Rural Health School (SGRHS) extends to you the opportunity to experience a field trip to traditional communities on the Pitjantjatjara lands.

This opportunity will enable you to learn about traditional and contemporary lifestyle, explore the land, culture and knowledge, whilst experiencing the outback environment.

Aims:

- To develop skills, networks and knowledge relevant to working with Aboriginal people in remote areas.
- To provide participants with a range of experiences which will link the above learning with the reality of the environment, places, people, stories, songs, artwork, and food.
- Enable participants to experience the awesome, diverse and challenging outback
